"Is Raymond Burr in a wheelchair on the 'Iron-side' series because he has a health problem? I can't imagine any other reason for having an invalid for the hero of a police show."

The producer thinks it gives an interesting quality to the series. Presumably Burr agrees because "Iron-side" is HIS show and it's done the way he wants it. On the set he never sits in it unless he's on camera. In one of the early scripts this season Ironsides was oper-ated on unsuccessfully so he'll be sitting down for another year at least. of the series is real. It was built by a family of ship-wrights on a large estate in Montecito on the California coast near Santa Barbara about 100 years ago. An exact replica has been built at 20th Century Fox Studios. All interiors were filmed on studio sound stages. It does-n't have an exact geographical location in the script.

'My family and I enjoyed the all-Negro show titled 'Soul' on NBC this month. We are an average white family who has no white family who has no opportunity for real contact with Negroes and we thought it was the best possible form of race relations to share their laughter. They obviously enjoyed themselves. Will this be a regular show?"

Its producers George Schlatter and Ed Friendly hope it will. Just a year ago these same men previewed a similar show that later a similar show that later became a weekly series call-ed "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In."
